IPPE — International Production & Processing Expo will take place February 12-14 at the Georgia World Congress Center in Atlanta, GA. The event will have more than 1,300 exhibitors and previous shows have had more than 30,000 attendees. The show will focus on innovation, education, and networking opportunities for professionals in the feed, poultry, and meat industries. The show is sponsored by the US Poultry & Egg Association, the North American Meat Institute, and the American Feed Industry Association (AFIA).

IPPE will feature the AFIA's Pet Food Conference, which usually includes about 250 attendees from pet food manufacturers and ingredient suppliers to the pet food industry and topical educational sessions, such as the "Feed Education Program" and "International Trade Issues and Impacts on US Agriculture." Note that some education sessions are fee-based and others are free to attendees. Other paid education programs include "Navigating Traceability and Business Management Systems in the Meat and Poultry Industry," "Environmental Conference for the Meat & Poultry Industry," and "Permit Required Confined Space- Train the Trainer." IPPE will have a welcome reception at the Georgia Aquarium, a chili and BBQ cook-off, and a college student career program where students can meet with potential employers.
